Professionalism and Provider-Patient Relationship

Nancy JECKER
University of Washington

Abstract
This presentation delineates the concept of professionalism as a three-part duty encompassing competence, advocacy and self-regulation. We explore each component of this duty, paying particular attention to ethical requirements for patient advocacy. The topic of cultural humility is woven throughout the presentation.